

Afternoon Tea

Available from 2pm until 5pm

It was the Portuguese and Dutch traders who first imported tea to Europe, with regular shipments by 1610. Ships from Holland and Scandinavia brought tea to the British coast, then stood offshore while smugglers met them and unloaded the precious cargo in small vessels. The smugglers, often local fishermen, snuck the tea inland through underground passages and hidden paths to special hiding places. One of the best hiding places was in the local parish church!
